

The University of Montana Enhancing student settings with stylish draperies

As experts in higher education services – from product procurement to project management and installation – American Education Supply was recently hired to install new draperies for the University of Montana. The aim of this multi-year project was to improve the look and feel of certain facilities on campus.

“The product is of high quality and our experience working with their team was very good. They were friendly and personable, and they always meet deadlines.”

– Brad Hall, University of Montana

At the outset of the project, we met with Brad Hall, Associate Director of Facilities and Maintenance, to discuss their view on everything from style to affordability and dependability. We coordinated an on-site visit with Brad to understand the full scope of the project and provided a detailed plan outlining the start-to-finish process.

To ensure we met the high standards of the university and its students, this plan included:

- ▶ On-site inspection and walkthroughs of the building
- ▶ The ability to procure the same materials that were installed on campus previously
- ▶ Phasing of the project to accommodate other events occurring on campus during the same timeframe

In offering the university a single point of contact, we smoothly guided their team through the entire project and, ultimately, provided them with a final result that exceeded expectations.
